

CLOTHING MEASURES

DISCOVER YOUR SIZE

Knowing or calculating our measurements helps us to find out what size of clothing corresponds to us. Artero wants to guide you in this process and for that reason we present you a size chart through which you can have a clearer reference at the time of buying a piece of cloth.

In order to determine your size you have to take measurements of your body, a process that will have a more accurate result if done in front of a mirror and wearing underwear. Another tip you should follow is to place the tape measure on the part you want to measure: loose and horizontal. Finally, even if you rely heavily on your memory, write down your measurements so that you don't forget them!

WHAT SHOULD I MEASURE? CHEST, WAIST AND HIPS

To find out what size you are for those top garments such as T-shirts, dresses, blouses or tops, you should calculate the circumference of the following body parts and compare it with the table below.

- CHEST: To take the measurement, go around the body at the most prominent point of the chest and back. Just below the armpit.
- WAIST: It encircles the measurement around the waist with no slack.
- HIP: Surrounds the body passing through the widest part of the hip line.
